Meet Our Students

Bryanna Samuels

‘19 BSBA

“I was most surprised by my peers at Eller. I found numerous mentors that guided me through the process in school and toward achieving my career aspirations. Without their help, I can say positively that I would not be where I am today.”

Currently a junior studying finance and entrepreneurship, Bryanna Samuels plans to graduate in May 2019. Bryanna is a Top 50 African American Scholar and an honors student. Last summer, she interned as a sophomore investment banking analyst with UBS in the Financial Institutions Group in New York City. Bryanna is returning to New York this summer to intern with Lazard as an investment banking analyst.

In addition to her favorite quote (left), Bryanna shared nine other things unique to her:

1. Growing up, I was a competitive track and field athlete.

2. After graduation, I aspire to work on Wall Street for two years in investment banking and then complete my MBA/JD.

3. I am a dual citizen of Canada and the United States.

4. I chose to pursue a career on Wall Street because it is a highly intense environment where I am constantly pushed to do my best and I can learn a lot in a short period. Most importantly, I find the work interesting.

5. I was a competitive swimmer for 10 years, which spurred my dream of being an Olympic athlete when I grew up.

6. When I was deciding a major, I couldn’t decide between Accounting, Finance, and Economics, but believe Finance is a good balance of the fields.

7. I am a huge fan of breakfast food. I often go to brunch and eat breakfast for dinner.

8. I chose to double major in Entrepreneurship to learn more about the mindset and process of starting a business and to develop my innovative thinking.

9. I am currently reading “Barbarians at the Gate: The Fall of RJR Nabisco.” It was recommended by a friend to learn more about Wall Street.
Justin Rodriquez
’18 MSF

“I chose finance because I always loved math and the career opportunities are endless.”

“The Eller College and the finance undergraduate program blew away the expectations I had for my education. I truly believe we have world-class professors in the department and all of them were really dedicated to helping me succeed. I will remember each faculty member for a long time.” Justin Rodriguez, from Moorpark, California, will complete his master’s in finance degree in August 2018. Justin has accepted a job as a real estate finance specialist for Nations Direct Mortgage in Santa Ana, California. Long term, he would love to help this company grow into a leader in the B2B real estate industry. He is also hoping to teach part-time as a college instructor.

Here are some things that make him, him:

1. I got and held onto the nickname “JROD” my entire life, because when I was playing little league AROD was a big deal. It just kind of stuck.

2. I love coaching youth football and basketball, and plan on coaching again after graduation.

3. My first internship was as a financial analyst through the UA Athletics Department.

4. I will be 21 years old when I graduate from the Master’s program.

5. I’m a movie fanatic. You can catch me at a local Century theatre multiple times a month.

6. My passion for teaching stems from a position I had at the Take Charge Cats program on campus. I led many personal finance workshops in local middle and high schools around Tucson, as well as on the UA campus.

7. I watch a lot of sports, specifically NBA and NFL. I fanatically follow the LA Lakers and the LA Chargers.

8. To this day, the greatest game I’ve ever watched was the 2006 Rose Bowl (Texas vs. USC).

9. I love trying new food places in Tucson. I would love to open and run a restaurant someday.

David Yin
’18 PhD

David Yin received his PhD from the University of Arizona in May 2018, after obtaining both a bachelor’s and master’s in finance from Eller. “Obtaining three degrees here says a lot about how much I enjoyed the Finance department.”

In Fall 2018, David will start as an assistant professor at Miami University in Ohio. “I am very excited to start the next stage of my life. At the same time, I’m sure that in four months, I will miss the weather here in Tucson.”

David’s dissertation, “Local Tournament Incentives and Firm Risk,” written under the direction of Ryan Williams, assistant professor of finance, examines whether the presence of highly-paid CEOs in a particular locale affects risk-taking behaviors of lower-paid local CEOs.

While most prior studies focus on internal incentives through compensation design, David’s work shows that CEOs are also incentivized by external local incentives. The results are consistent with theoretical predictions from both social comparison theory and rank-order tournament theory.

During the doctoral program, David had the opportunity to work with multiple faculty members on research. David says, “I have learned so much from them during the process. I presented my research at several international conferences and workshops in Mont-Tremblant, Canada, Halifax, Canada, and Lille, France, along with many national conferences.

“I have one paper published in the Journal of Corporate Finance and am currently revising another one coauthored with a PhD student in our department.”

“I have spent a third of my life (nine years) studying at the University of Arizona.”
Alumni Profile

Venkat (Vinnie) Badinehal
’92 BSBA

Vinnie Badinehal is a great supporter of the Eller College and has been personally involved in helping many Eller students start their careers in finance. After graduating from high school, Vinnie moved to the U.S. from Mumbai, India, and earned his bachelor’s degree with a focus in international business from the Eller College in 1992. Following his graduation, Vinnie started his career in international marketing for General Electric.

Vinnie later earned an MBA from The Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania where he was an Emerging Economies Fellow. At Wharton, he was the founding chairman of the Wharton-India Economic Forum and currently serves on the advisory board of the forum. Vinnie became interested in investment banking during his MBA program and, following graduation, started at Merrill Lynch where he covered financial institutions for over a decade. He later worked as managing director and head of the Financial Institutions Group in the Americas at Deutsche Bank. Vinnie joined RBC Capital Markets in April 2017 as the head of the Financial Institutions Group within Global Investment Banking based in New York. At RBC, Vinnie’s work focuses on the investment banking needs of financial institutions. “Our primary focus is helping financial companies stay safe and growing by providing the right advice at the right time. We are busy when the economy is good, and we are really busy when the economy is not good. When the economy is down, financial institutions are under stress—and the market isn’t going to recover until these companies are back on sound footing.”

Vinnie’s View

I am very appreciative of the role UofA and Eller played in my overall personal growth at a critical time of my life and therefore have tried my best to give back. I started giving back by supporting the annual fund and helping to recruit Eller students. A few years ago, I was asked to support the new Professional Development Center (PDC) and it has been great to support the growth of the programs and students.

Vinnie’s Advice

For Students

The key to every individual’s success is hard work and humility, in addition to building good relationships with people and mentors. Always do the best job you can, knowing that we don’t necessarily control the final outcome. Always be positive, lead by example, do the right thing, and stay strong to your ethical roots in whatever you do.
Achievement Awards
UA Professional

Congratulations to David Baggs ’81 BSBA and Gary Chiate ’63 BSBA, who were recently recognized and presented the UA Alumni Association Professional Achievement Award. The department is very fortunate to have so many exceptional alumni.

David Baggs ’81 BSBA

After earning his bachelor’s at Eller, David Baggs earned an MBA from William & Mary in 1985.

He worked for CSX—one of the three largest railroads in the U.S. and a Fortune 250 company—for 33 years before retiring in December 2017. David took on a number of strategy, economic and planning leadership roles at CSX, including leading roles in CSX’s Contrail acquisition and CSX’s sales of American Commercial Lines, CTI Logistics and The Grand Teton Lodge Company. David finished his tenure as CSX serving at treasurer and head of investor relations. David is widely recognized as a leader in his industry. For instance, under David’s leadership Institutional Investor Magazine rated CSX’s investor relations department as both first in their sector and as a most honored company (among all U.S. publicly traded companies) for six consecutive years. David had a remarkable career—rising to the pinnacle of success in his industry. Moreover, David has stayed true to his roots and consistently returned to Arizona to support the university and our students. Congratulations, David!

Gary Chiate ’63 BSBA

Upon leaving the University of Arizona, Gary Chiate ’63 BSBA served in the United States Army. He then began his investment career in 1967 at Merrill Lynch, where has was a vice president and on the company’s President’s Council. He joined Oppenheimer in 1977 and has been a leader there for the last 40 years. Gary currently serves as executive director/investments and is also a member of Oppenheimer’s Executive Council, a prestigious recognition awarded to the company’s top financial advisors. In his current role, Gary concentrates on assisting with investment strategies for high net worth individuals, corporations, pensions and profit-sharing plans. Gary is one of the UA’s most loyal alumni and has opened many doors in the financial industry for our students. He hosted networking opportunities at Oppenheimer’s Los Angeles and Manhattan offices for Eller students and works with Eller Professional Development to connect Eller students with internship opportunities at Oppenheimer. Congratulations, Gary!
Investments Club

In two trips this year, the UA Investments Club sent a total of 35 students to Wall Street/New York City for networking. Students met with alumni at several firms across the city and hosted mixers with more than 40 alumni. All 15 students on the Fall 2017 trip have accepted internships or full-time offers.

Investments Club President Kendra Yoffie ’18 BSBA won two senior awards this year. With her hard work and dedication, Kendra won the Finance Senior Student of the Year and was awarded the UA Freeman Medal Award (one of only six university-wide senior awards). Congratulations, Kendra!

Finance Seniors Win UA Freeman Medal Three Straight Years

In honor of Dr. Merrill Freeman, who served the UA as a regent and as a chancellor, two medals are awarded annually to seniors who demonstrate outstanding moral force of character, membership in organizations, and service. Our outstanding finance seniors—Fabio Mire ’16, Jessica Roberts ’17 and Kendra Yoffie ’18—have won a Freeman Medal Award for three years running.

Third Annual Meritage Real Estate Challenge

Is the mortgage interest deduction a meaningful driver for homeownership?

More than 100 students in the undergraduate real estate finance course (FIN 460) took part in the competition generously sponsored by Steve Hilton and Meritage Homes. The four finalist teams presented their insights to Professor Mike Bond and judges on April 20 in McClelland Hall. “The first place team did a great job of researching a complicated question,” said Professor Bond.

In a study forthcoming in the Journal of Financial Economics, Associate Professor Alice Bonaime and Assistant Professor Mihai Ion (with coauthor Huseyin Gulen) show that uncertainty surrounding government policies hinders merger and acquisition activity. Because mergers and acquisitions play an integral role in the allocation of capital, their findings show that policymakers’ lack of clarity regarding monetary policy, fiscal policy, and financial regulation contributes to inefficiencies and leads to suboptimal capital allocations.

Associate Professor Scott Cederburg (and his coauthors Doron Avramov and Katarina Lucivjanska) study the risk of long-horizon stock market investments in a paper published in The Review of Financial Studies. Whereas conventional wisdom suggests that stocks are much safer for long-term investors, Scott and his coauthors show that stocks may actually be riskier over long horizons from the perspective of investors who believe that time-varying economic growth is an important determinant of asset prices.

In an article forthcoming in the Journal of Applied Corporate Finance, Professor Kathleen Kahle (and co-authors Craig Doidge, Andrew Karolyi, and Rene Stulz) find that the decline in listed U.S. firms over the past two decades is driven by a reluctance to go public. U.S. firms have become more R&D intensive, and public disclosure could provide valuable details about their research to competitors. Moreover, the availability of private equity has increased, making it easier for firms to raise money without going public.

Professor Rick Sias’s paper "Sentiment Metrics and Investor Demand" (co-authored with Laura Starks and former UA finance doctoral student Luke DeVault) was accepted at the Journal of Finance. Contrary to more than 70 years of conventional wisdom, Rick and his co-authors demonstrate that measures of investor sentiment capture the demand shocks of institutional investors rather than individual investors.
Women in Finance Brunch

In February, the Investments Club hosted its 4th Annual Women in Finance Brunch with keynote speaker Ilene Fiszel-Bieler, head of investor relations at State Street Bank in New York. More than 75 freshman and sophomore women attended the brunch.

"Organizing the 4th Annual Women in Finance Brunch was an incredibly rewarding experience," said Claire O’Connor ’19 BSBA (Finance). “I was really honored to be a part of the brunch this year and am looking forward to planning next year’s event with help from Eller and the Finance department.” Each year, the club accepts nominations for top performing freshmen and sophomore pre-business students who have demonstrated a commitment to academic success and leadership within Eller. Women are selected to attend the brunch to learn more about careers in the financial services industry and what it is like to be a finance major. The attendance list has grown from 30 attendees in the first year. Fiszel-Bieler spoke about being the only female managing director at the time of her promotion and the adversity she faced along the way to become one of less than a dozen Investor Relations Directors at major U.S. Investment Banks.

Kendra Yoffie and Claire O’Connor take a moment to celebrate UA and Eller College before the start of the Women in Finance Brunch.

Faculty Awards

Finance department faculty received five teaching awards this year! Professor Aazam Virani received the Eller Student’s Choice Award for the Large Class category from the Eller College Dean’s Council in Spring 2018. In Eller Small Courses for the Finance Major—presented by the Eller College Dean’s Council on behalf of the Eller Student Body—Professor David Brown was recognized with the award in Fall 2017, and Professor Arvind Singh was presented with the award in Spring 2018. Professor Singh also won the MBA’s Most Valued Professor Award in the Fall. Professor David Brown also won the Dean’s Award for Undergraduate Teaching Excellence for FIN 413, Valuation Modeling, taught in Spring.

Faculty Updates

With pleasure for their futures and sadness for the department, we announce that two faculty retired this year—Professor Alex Wilson last October and Professor Tom Gosnell in May. Both Alex and Tom have been active with student groups, and taught and mentored undergraduate, MSF, and MBA students. They will be deeply missed!

We welcomed two new lecturers to the department—Hilmi Songur and Matt Haertzen. Professor Matt Haertzen joined us from Northern Arizona University and, in addition to many online courses in all our programs, he has taken over direction of the Applied Portfolio Management class from Professor Arvind Singh. Professor Hilmi Songur arrived from Northwest Missouri State University and is teaching our introductory finance course.
Wall Street Scholars Program

The Wall Street Scholars Program (WSSP) is a highly competitive and comprehensive program designed to help students earn internships on Wall Street. In collaboration with the Eller College Finance Department, Eller Professional Development Center, and Alumni, the WSSP helps bridge the gap between the academic and professional skills needed to land internships on Wall Street.

Your commitment to invest in the future of the Department of Finance helps us advance and grow. Contributions may be made to the Department Discretionary Fund and the Don Seeley Fund for Excellence in Finance.

Congratulations, Graduates!

David Baggs ’81 BSBA congratulates May 2018 graduates at the annual breakfast on May 10. David recently retired from his role as treasurer and vice president of capital markets and investor relations at CSX.

“My career success to a large degree is due to the education and experience I gained while attending the University of Arizona.”
